

Veterinarian for Experimental Surgery (m/f/d)

The Center for Experimental Models and Transgenic Services (CEMT-FR), Medical Center - University of Freiburg invites applications for a full time position. CEMT-FR is a research as well as a service department with about 70 members of staff responsible for laboratory animal activities at the University as well as the Medical Center.

Duties will include:

- Veterinary care of pigs, sheep and rabbits
- Performance of anesthesia and surgery, as well as perioperative veterinary care and pain therapy in connection with experimental studies in the respective species
- Consultancy and support of scientific working groups in the design of experiments, preparation of applications for animal experiments, performance of experiments, data evaluation and publication
- Instructing and guiding of veterinary and technical staff
- Work organization, documentation and quality management
- Management of veterinary dispensary
- Participation in basic and advanced training

Applicants must possess a DVM degree or equivalent. Practical experience in the veterinary care of pigs, sheep and rabbits is required. The ideal candidate is qualified according to Function B article 23 of the European Directive 2010/63. A high level of motivation and sense of responsibility is essential as well as a pro-active and self-reliant mode of operation.

The position offers opportunities such as:

- Substantiated and structured job training
- Professional and personal development by continuing education
- Qualification as Board Certified Specialist for Laboratory Animals Science
- Opportunity for scientific activity
- Family-friendly workplace in an sought after region and offers for childcare

Professional rank and salary will be commensurate with the candidate's qualifications and experience

More info:

cemt.info@uniklinik-freiburg.de